

Sticky Situation

CHADWICK is determined to learn to play the bluebell horn (an instrument made from a bluebell flower), but he won't accept anybody's help, even though his failure to even make a sound with it is frustrating him. Chadwick becomes even more annoyed when COSMO gives him a demonstration – she can play really loud! Time for Bellona to send the Wigglers to wiggle out their problem.

On their way through the wood, the Wigglers come across RED ADMIRAL BUTTERFLY, perched on the side of a sycamore tree. On seeing the wigglers, the Admiral is not his usual gruff, avuncular self; he's a bit cagey, telling them to just go about their business – nothing to see here. CYD is suspicious, is something wrong? Does the Admiral need help!? The Admiral blusters – he doesn't need help; he's just staying here because... there's such a lovely view. Chadwick likes the sound of this – he whizzes up the tree to see the view too, even though Admiral protests. Chadwick is confused; there's no view at all because a big leaf is in the way! It's then that Chadwick discovers the Admiral's real reason for staying here. It turns out he wasn't being completely up front about not needing help – he's stuck in some sticky sycamore sap and now Chadwick is stuck too!

Cyd and Cosmo try to help but quickly find themselves stuck as well. The Admiral is contrite – he didn't want to admit he needed help - he thought he could get out of this sticky situation on his own, but now they're all stuck! Cyd wonders if maybe now would be a good time to ask for help, the Admiral agrees. They all start shouting for help, but there doesn't seem to be anyone near enough to hear; they need to be louder. Cyd has an idea – Cosmo's was loud on the bluebell horn– maybe try that!

Cosmo pulls out the bluebell horn and gives a mighty blast, drawing the attention of Barbara The Stag Beetle. The Wigglers call out to warn her of the sap, and the strong beetle soon has everyone out of the sticky fix. The Admiral is grateful – admitting that everybody needs help sometimes. Back at the Caterpillar Cubbyhole, BELLONA leads a song about it being OK to ask for help. Chadwick finally has the courage to ask Cosmo if she'll help teach him how to play the Bluebell Horn, which she does... And Chadwick gives the song a rousing, if slightly off-tune ending.

Izzy Takes a Breath

It's a sunny day in Wiggle Wood and Chadwick is bursting with energy. He's eager to play with Cosmo, but she's busy doing a jigsaw, Chadwick tries to join in, but he's got too much bubbly energy for such a patient activity. He heads off to find Cyd, who is happily painting, but the wiggly caterpillar is just too wriggly to paint. Bellona suggests that it might be a good idea for Chadwick to head off to the wood to wiggle out his wriggles.

On his way through the wood Chadwick thinks he spots something zipping about up ahead. After a fun game of hide and seek, Chadwick finally catches up with Izzy Mayfly, who is also bursting with energy. Izzy explains that she's been stuck underwater as a larva for aaaages. Now she's finally out in the sunshine she wants to play, play, play!!

Chadwick and Izzy have a blast playing every game Chadwick can think of – tag, What's the Time Mrs Ladybird, hopscotch, football... but Chadwick is running out of both ideas and puff. Chadwick enlists Cyd and Cosmo's help, and whilst Cosmo has lots of practical ideas, Cyd can see that Chadwick is running out of energy, and even though Izzy is still desperate to have fun, she's flagging too. Cyd suggests that maybe there are some less frantic ways to have fun? With the encouragement of the other Wigglers Chadwick comes up with some less frenetic games – sleeping lions, shadow stories and best of all, cloud watching. As Chadwick lies on his back with his mayfly friend, Bellona joins them. Chadwick explains how he's realised that whilst racing around is great, sometimes chilling out can be just as much fun, and maybe it's even time for a mindfulness moment!

What's in a Name

Our Wigglers are having a tasty snack, but COSMO is getting frustrated: CHADWICK likes to call strawberries 'dawbees'; Cyd calls them 'red berries'. Cosmo just can't understand why the others can't use the right name. BELLONA eases Cosmo onto a different topic by suggesting they head out into the wood to wiggle out their problems.

As the friends wiggle through the wood they encounter COLIN WOODLOUSE. Cosmo is excited to see her friend, she's been reading all about woodlice! Does Colin know that woodlice have lots of funny nicknames? Colin sighs – he absolutely does know this, but Cyd and Chadwick are eager to know more – what sort of nicknames? Cosmo starts to list the names but then becomes concerned about what the right name for a woodlouse actually is – after all, Colin isn't even a louse – he's a crustacean! And pillbug doesn't work, he's not a bug! Colin is near his wits end, but Cosmo misinterprets Colin's feelings as frustration about them not having found the right name. She sings a song expressing her consternation, Cyd and Chadwick giggling as they try and mime the things the names make them think of!

*Roly-poly, cheeselog, which should it be?
Chiselpig, monkeypea, wriggle with me!
Pillbug, doodlebug, woodlouse too,
Sowbug, slater, to name just a few.
Doodlehopper, 'tater bug, Armadillo,
Paddybug, chunkybug, I just don't know!*

As the song reaching its climax Colin finally runs out of patience and stomps off in a huff. Cosmo is distraught – what did she do wrong!? A gentle nudge from Bellona, who has a knack for being in the right place at the right time, brings Cosmo to a revelation – she knows what she did wrong and how to put things right.

After a big apology Cosmo tells Colin that she has a question: there are all these funny names for woodlice, but what does Colin want to be called? Colin smiles and giggles – there is actually a name that he likes best... The Wigglers hold their breath, waiting to hear what it is... Colin clears his throat, dramatically. "It's... Colin!" The friends all laugh – that is an excellent name, and Cosmo is happy to learn that everyone should respect what people choose to call themselves. And Bellona is on hand to lead everyone in a song celebrating the names we chose to call ourselves.

*That's your name — and that's just right,
It makes you smile, it feels so bright!
Not pillbug, chunkybug, or cheeselog too,
Just Colin Woodlouse —that's really you!*

*Names can be silly, or long, or new,
But your favourite name belongs to you!
So we'll call you Colin, with joy and pride —
The name you picked, with friends by your side.*

The Accident

Chadwick is all excitement – Cyd and Cosmo have been working on a surprise for him – new racing wheels! Chadwick quickly jumps in and begins zooming about the caterpillar cubby, but in his enthusiasm, he accidentally bumps into a table knocking over the paints Cyd used to decorate Chadwick's new wheels. Chadwick is apologetic but Cyd is still a bit cross. Before things can escalate, Bellona arrives and gently suggests that Chadwick takes his new wheels outside with his friends for a test wiggle through the wood.

Chadwick whizzes off performing flashy loops and speedy spins. Cosmo is pleased with how the wheels are handling and Cyd is happy with her superb designs, but maybe Chadwick should slow down a bit? Chadwick has no intention of going slow, in fact he's eager to demonstrate just how fast these new wheels can go... Neeow! That's when <POOF!>, Chadwick zooms right through a spiderweb. Whoopsie!

Cyd and Cosmo giggle at how the web has left Chadwick all sticky, but someone is not laughing – Nancy Spider scuttles down from a nearby leaf – she's very cross – she'd been working on that web all morning! Chadwick says sorry, but Nancy does not seem appeased. Chadwick is confused – why is Nancy still cross – breaking her web was an accident! Practical Cosmo adds that maybe next time Nancy should choose somewhere other than the middle of the path to build her web. This just seems to make Nancy more cross, and she stalks off to sulk behind a nearby toadstool.

Chadwick is at a loss – breaking the web was an accident, and he said sorry - what is Nancy's problem!? Cyd wonders if maybe Nancy doesn't believe that Chadwick is really sorry. Cosmo agrees – Chadwick needs to think of a way to prove how he feels. This gives Chadwick a brilliant idea - they'll make Nancy a new web! Cosmo isn't sure how easy it is to make a web, but she's keen to try – it'll be an exciting experiment!

In a silly musical montage, Chadwick, Cosmo and Cyd set about trying to build a spider web using useful string from Cosmo's backpack. Things start out well but quickly descend into a pickle with the Wigglers all tangled in the string, rolling towards the toadstool that Nancy is hiding behind. Nancy is initially cross to be disturbed but can't help giggling at the twisted mess the Wigglers have got themselves into. Thankfully it's no problem for Nancy, with her eight legs, to untangle the little caterpillars and when Chadwick explains what they were trying to do she is truly touched. She explains that she did know Chadwick was really sorry but even though it was just an accident she was still cross – all her hard work! Chadwick realises that sometimes forgiving someone can be harder than saying sorry, and he's really glad that Nancy is now able to accept his apology.

Back at the Caterpillar Cubby, Bellona leads the Wigglers in a song about forgiveness' building to a climax in which Chadwick becomes over excited and knocks Cyd's paints over again – whoopsie! Chadwick is sorry and Cyd, after a big breath, is ready to forgive him.

Happy Goodbye.

It's early winter in Wiggle Wood and Bellona needs to flit off to make sure an elderly butterfriend is OK in the cold. Cyd is a little sad – she's going to miss her winged mentor today. Bellona tells Cyd and the other Wigglers not to worry – she's sure a wiggle through the wood will keep them happy and occupied until she gets back.

The friends head off for a wiggle through the beautiful frosty wood. On their way Cyd finds Hazel Fieldmouse busy gathering up bits of snuggly moss. Cyd is delighted to see her friend – she loves spending time with Hazel and is eager to know what the little fieldmouse is up to. Hazel explains that she's collecting stuff for her winter nest – today is the day she is going to begin her hibernation. Cosmo explains to a confused Chadwick and Cyd that some creatures sleep through the winter – it's called 'hibernating'. Cyd is upset – does that mean that she won't get to see Hazel until spring!? That is such a long time and there are so many winter things she wants to share with her friend! Hazel tells Cyd, with a yawn, that she'll miss Cyd too, but hibernating is just what fieldmice do. Cyd, however, isn't prepared to accept this – she's determined to keep her friend awake!

In a fun musical sequence, the Wigglers set about finding ways to keep Hazel awake:

*Hazel, don't you close your eyes,
The snow is cold, so are goodbyes...
I know it's time to dream and doze,
But I'll miss your whiskers and twitchy nose.*

Cosmo thinks regular healthy snacks will help keep Hazel awake, Cyd has an idea for a Gold Rubeberg contraption to shake Hazel's pillow, and Chadwick simply thinks that singing really loud will help.

*I'll sing so loud you'll stay awake
Even the trees will start to shake!*

But as snow starts to fall, poor Hazel is getting chillier, and her yawns are getting bigger. Cyd starts to wonder if maybe it's a bit selfish to try and keep her friend awake, even if she knows she's going to miss her. It's then that our beloved Bellona arrives, she helps Cyd realise that even when we're not with our friends we carry them in our hearts until we see them again. Cyd and Hazel have a huge goodbye hug, then Bellona and the Wigglers sing Hazel to sleep, but not before Cyd gives Hazel a snuggly pillow that she promises won't shake!

*You're yawning now, it's hard to fight,
That sleepy tug of winter's night.
So go ahead, curl in your nest,
We'll wriggle quietly while you rest.
Goodnight, sweet Hazel, rest your head,
The snow's your blanket, leaves your bed.
And when spring peeks through skies of blue,
We'll wriggle back to play with you.*

The Great Slowdown

The Wigglers are about to head out for a wiggle through the wood and Chadwick is bursting with excitement. He zooms around the Caterpillar Cubbyhole, urging Cyd and Cosmo to hurry up, but they're still getting ready. It takes Bellona fluttering in to gently remind Chadwick to breathe and wait... although the minute his friends are ready, zoom! — Chadwick is off again!

Chadwick whizzes ahead, accidentally bumping into his friend Toby Snail - thankfully Toby's hard shell stops him getting hurt. Chadwick is excited to see Toby and eager to play, encouraging him to join in energetic games, but Toby's slow pace means that he's no good at racing or tag or even football, although he does inadvertently become part of the game when he retracts into his shell and momentarily replaces the ball – whoopsie! Poor Toby reaches the conclusion that he can't join in with any of Chadwick's fast games – he guesses they're just not for snails, and he sadly slides off home (very slowly).

Chadwick is crestfallen - he really does want to play with Toby and doesn't want his friend to be sad. Cosmo agrees – if only Chadwick wasn't always so fast! This prompts a revelation for the speedy little caterpillar – he's had an idea – quick, they need to find Toby! ... oh wait, he's right next to them – this snail really is slow.

Bellona arrives in time to shout: 'on your marks, get set, CRAWL!' for Wiggle Wood's first ever slow race – the one who comes last wins, but you have to keep moving! In a slapstick sequence the Wigglers desperately try to be slower than Toby, but trip and topple, lose balance and fall on their bottoms. Even with Chadwick, Cyd and Cosmo doing their best to be slow, Toby wins the very short race. The jubilant snail is over the moon – this is the first time he's ever won a race, and even though Chadwick is a little grumpy about losing, he's thrilled to discover that if you try hard enough you can always find a way to have fun with a friend, no matter their abilities.

Back at the Cubbyhole, Bellona leads a joyful closing song about playing together at any pace.

Finding Your Legs

Cyd and Chadwick are having fun pretending to be butterflies. Cyd makes believe she has beautifully colourful wings, Chadwick pretends he can fly super-fast, whizzing all over the place. Cosmo, however, isn't sure about joining in – the idea of flying like Bellona seems dangerous and anyway, she really likes her wiggly body – the prospect of becoming a butterfly someday isn't appealing. With Cosmo starting to become frustrated at Cyd and Chadwick's pleas to join their game, Bellona steps in and suggests that they go for a wiggle through the wood to wiggle out their problem and today Bellona thinks she'll come along too!

As Bellona and the Wigglers pass the pond Cosmo hears quiet sniffing, she heads over to see what's going on and discovers her friend, Tilly Tadpole resting against a lily pad. Tilly seems upset and Cosmo is concerned – what's wrong little Tilly? "Just look at that!" sniffs Tilly sadly. Cosmo and the other Wigglers look beneath the water and spot something amazing – Tilly has grown legs! Chadwick is confused – legs are great – he could do with an extra pair himself! Cosmo also doesn't understand why Tilly is sad – it just means that she is turning into a frog – that's what happens to tadpoles. Sensitive Cyd digs a little deeper asking Tilly why the legs are bothering her. Tilly admits that she's scared about becoming a frog, leaving the pond and going out into the big world. In a splashy musical sequence Tilly explains her anxieties.

*Look at these legs! They're wobbly still,
They kick around against my will!
My tail could help me swim and glide,
But these just stick out on the side!*

*I like it here, it's calm and cool,
The pond's my home, my splishy pool.
But now I'm changing bit by bit —
A froglet now... I must admit!*

*And croaking?! Really? It's a riot!
I like my voice all soft and quiet.
And hopping? Hmm... I barely bump!
What if I leap... and then I dump
Right in the mud with a great big splat?
No thanks! I'm not ready for that.*

Cosmo thinks she understands – she's been feeling nervous about turning into a butterfly one day. Thankfully Bellona is here to help calm the young creatures worries with a tale of her own transformation – of how she was once a wriggly little caterpillar just like Cosmo and how she spun her chrysalis. She explains that she didn't know what it would feel like to fly, she wasn't even sure she wanted to, but when she finally emerged with her beautiful wings, she discovered how wonderful the big wide world could be. Tilly asks if Bellona was scared. "Oh yes," Bellona nods. "But excited too. Both can live in your tummy at the same time."

With the story over, Tilly admits that she is a bit curious about becoming a frog – it might not be so bad to get arms and start to hop. Cosmo agrees – Bellona’s wings are very cool. In a final song Bellona reassures Tilly and the Wigglers that there’s no to rush grow up – they can do it at their own pace.

*Growing bit by bit each day,
Not too fast — and that’s okay.
Wings or legs, a leap, a glide,
It’s always you deep inside.*

*Scared and curious side by side,
Take your time — enjoy the ride.
Try new things, go slow or quick,
Growing up comes bit by bit.*

Funny Bug

CYD and COSMO are having fun making silly hats, but CHADWICK is in a playful mood – all he wants to do is burst out on Cyd and Cosmo shouting ‘Boo!’ and making them jump. It was kind of funny the first time, but all the boos are getting in the way of their all-important hat-making, so BELLONA suggests Chadwick heads off into the wood to wiggle things out.

As Chadwick wiggles along he hears someone calling his name but is confused when he can’t work out where the cheeky voice and laughter is coming from. Is it a ghost? Or the spirit of Wiggle Wood!? An “Ow!” and a bump reveal who the seemingly disembodied voice belongs to – it’s Chadwick’s friend SIMON STICK INSECT! He has been masquerading as a twig this whole time. Chadwick thinks this gag is really funny – at last he’s found someone to appreciate his sense of humour.

The friends begin a prank-off with Chadwick trying to jump out on Simon to make him jump, and Simon trying to trick Chadwick, fooling him into thinking that normal sticks are really him.

“That’s not me you’re talking to Chadwick, I’m over here...”

But both friends soon begin to get frustrated with the other’s gags. Thankfully, Cyd and Cosmo arrive to show off their hats – they’re fabulously silly and covered with feathers and twirly bits. Chadwick and Simon can’t help but roll around laughing, but Chadwick stops laughing – Cyd and Cosmo managed to make them laugh without a prank! Cyd giggles – of course – there are lots of ways to make people laugh!

In a joyful music sequence Simon and the Wigglers discover different ways to make each other laugh with funny disguises (twig wigs and leaf moustaches), tickly-vines, wiggly walks and silly faces.

Bellona finds them all rolling on the floor laughing, and they all giggle even more when Simon pulls his old trick of pretending to be a twig. Bellona leads the friends in a song about the joy of laughter and how laughing with your friends is the best thing of all.

Dragon Surprise

Cyd has just finished reading a book about unicorns and tells Cosmo and Chadwick how she'd really love to meet one. Cosmo matter-of-factly tells Cyd that unicorns aren't real – they're only in stories, which saddens Cyd – she really wants to believe in them. Bellona, wanting to cheer her little charge, sends the Wigglers out into the wood to wiggle out this dilemma.

As the Wigglers make their way past the pond, they hear a loud rumbling voice claiming to be a dragon! Cyd is scared but excited – a real live dragon here in Wiggle Wood. Chadwick immediately dons an acorn helmet – he wants to charge off and capture the dragon. Cosmo however is sceptical – there are no such thing as dragons! She sticks to her guns even when the 'dragon' calls out that it really is real and extra scary – rooooooar! Cyd and Chadwick want to believe – going on a dragon hunt would be so much fun! Cosmo says it's pointless, but she is kind of intrigued as to what's actually going on.

The friends wiggle off to try and find the dragon (or prove there isn't a dragon...) but its voice keeps on moving, zipping from one place to another, leading our Wigglers on a merry dance. And even though Cosmo continues to refuse to believe the dragon is real, she is clearly starting to enjoy the chase. With the dragon proving illusive, Cosmo hits on the idea of a dragon trap. Using twigs, pebbles and an ivy vine, the caterpillars construct a trap and lure their 'dragon' into it, and they're successful, the trap is sprung, and they approach their quarry – even Cosmo is eager to see if there's an actual dragon... but what they find is... their cheeky friend Nerida Dragonfly – she's been having a ball playing a prank on the caterpillars!

Chadwick thinks this is hilarious, but Cyd is grumpy – she's preparing herself for Cosmo to gloat about being proved right, however Cosmo also seems a little downhearted. She admits that even though she knew deep down that the dragon wasn't real she had so much fun on the dragon hunt with her friends that she was starting to hope there really was a dragon! It's then that Bellona arrives, offering some gentle wisdom to help Cosmo realise that even when you know something isn't real, playing along is super fun.

Bellona leads Nerida and the friends in a song about the wonders of imagination and Nerida is more than happy to continue the game of caterpillars and dragons!

Insect Olympics

Chadwick is bursting with excitement – it's Wiggle Wood sports day and he's confident that with his speed he's going to win all the races! And he absolutely does win the first race – he's not only faster than Cyd and Cosmo but Spike Flea, Barbara Stag Beetle and Nancy Spider. Chadwick is jubilant – he LOVES being the best!

But then comes the next event – the high jump. Chadwick is ready to shine, but he's shocked when Spike leaps way higher than he does. Chadwick is dismayed – this means he's not the best! Cyd and Cosmo try to cheer Chadwick up – they're not the best either, but Chadwick isn't listening – he's intent on proving himself in the next event – weightlifting.

But once again Chadwick is beaten, this time by Barbara Stag Beetle who effortlessly lifts a pinecone twice her size – Chadwick, desperate to win, attempts to lift a big log but ends up toppling over and falling into some mud.

Chadwick really doesn't like not being the best – he's now determined to win the final event – the obstacle course. This time, Chadwick is back in his element — he zigzags, whizzes, and loops ahead of everyone but in his excitement to prove himself, he loses concentration and zooms way too fast off a ramp, taking to the skies and landing tangled in brambles halfway up a tree! Poor Chadwick – not only is he not the best, he's now stuck, unable to move without getting prickled!

Thankfully Chadwick's friends are on hand to help. Barbara Stag Beetle lifts a branch, placing it against the tree trunk, then Spike Flea hops up the branch and makes a giant leap to where Chadwick is stuck, untangling him from the brambles and allowing him to roll back down to the ground – phew.

Chadwick is filled with gratitude – if Barbara wasn't so strong and Spike wasn't able to jump so high, then he'd still be stuck up the tree forever! A gentle nudge from Bellona helps Chadwick realise that everyone has different strengths and he finally accepts that maybe it's OK not to be the best at every sport. Cyd and Cosmo agree with that and join Chadwick and Bellona in a song about celebrating our differences.
